Re: Proposed Fine Policy Revision

The Madison County Public Libraries, with the unanimous support of its Board of Trustees and its Management team, would like to ask the Board of County Commissioners to approve the following revision to its current policies related to overdue (late) fines.

Current Policies

It is the policy of the library to charge 25¢ per day for late books and audiobooks and $1 per day for late DVDs, up to a maximum of $5.00 per item. Fines are calculated for each day, except when the library is closed. Overdue fines must be paid in order to maintain borrowing privileges.

In addition, in the event that a patron has unpaid fines of more than $11.00 and has been delinquent for more than 3 months with no effort toward restitution, it is the policy of the library to submit this information to the Finance Office for further processing and collection. The county, in turn, contacts the patron in an effort to avoid sending the account to the State for collection. According to the written policy, "the window of opportunity to clear the patron's account closes on the day their record is sent to Raleigh. Once this happens, the library and the county finance office no longer have the power to restore the patron's good status". If the patron returns his/her overdue items, the Director or Administrative Manager will call the Finance Office, who in turn will call Raleigh to check on the status of the Patron's account.

Proposed Revision

The library proposes eliminating future fines for overdue/late books for the reasons outlined below and the elimination of all outstanding patron late fines.

Under the new policy, a user who keeps items past the due date will receive a series of notices reminding them that the item should be returned. If the items are not returned after 45 days beyond the due date, the user will receive a bill for the replacement cost of the materials and their ability to check out other materials will be suspended. If the item is returned, the user's ability to borrow materials will be restored. If the item cannot be found, the user can pay the bill for the item in total or in payments, and then their ability to borrow materials will be restored when the item is paid in full. Patrons who repeatedly need to reimburse the cost of materials will have the quantity of materials that they are able to check out reduced to two items to reduce loss exposure.

The library will make every effort to collect any outstanding amounts for lost or damaged books without the need to submit these names to the County for collection. However, after six months, any amount in excess of $50 will be submitted to the County for collection, and this amount will then be handled in accordance with the current collection policies of the Finance Office.

Background on Fine Free Libraries

The initial research about library fine data goes back as far as 1983. In addition, there has been a move in large metropolitan areas and throughout our state to go fine free, and several public library studies have analyzed the impact of eliminating fines.

- (1) The primary reason given for charging a late fine is to make people return their books on time.
 - However, there are actually very few studies that support this.
 - There are now numerous studies that show the increase in returned materials once fines were eliminated. Most studies show that 95% of library materials were returned within a week of their due date.
 - For some communities with lower income populations, the fines actually discouraged the return of materials to "avoid" the fine and resulted in decreased use of the library.

Fines may seem fair to people who can afford to pay them, but they negatively impact lower income patrons. Fines create a barrier for the communities who need libraries the most. Due to the recent pandemic, the number of people in our county who have been financially impacted has grown. Before the pandemic, the library would have listed our underserved communities as low-income adults and their families, adults with low literacy skills, seniors, teen parents, at-risk teens, homeless individuals, and some of our geographically isolated communities. Now we see people feeling economic limitations in all socio-economic groups.

We have already taken steps that have reduced late fees significantly by allowing checked out books to autorenew up to three times unless someone else is waiting for the item. This cushion of time resolves most late issues.

We found during our closure to the public that, when we suspended fines to avoid handling cash, people returned their materials on time, and many missing items were returned by patrons who heard about the suspension of fines.

Management staff has always waived individual fines from time to time based on individual circumstances when they are made aware of a situation that is beyond a patron's control.

- (2) Another reason that could be given for charging late fines is to supplement the library's budget.
 - However, we do not rely upon these fines to meet our budget. We are blessed to have a county that supports and believes in the value of having a library in each of our three main communities.
 - Here are the actual numbers from the library's budget:
 - In the 2019-2020 fiscal year, income from book dues/fees was $3145 (which also includes charges for lost and damaged books). We did not charge late fees from ~2/23 to 6/1 in 2020.
 - o In the more typical 2018-2019 year, this income was $5329.
 - O However, fines are less than 1% of our total operating budget.
 - The library system does its part to raise income as well by applying for and receiving more than $80,000 in State Aid annually, plus we apply for numerous grants every year to offset expenses that would have been budget items.
 - We also have three active Friends of the Library groups who provide thousands of dollars each year to offset expenses that would otherwise be paid for by the county.

In addition, there is an internal cost for applying late fees. Employee time that has been spent on analyzing fines, contacting patrons regarding fees, meeting with patrons to make financial arrangements, and calculating amounts due for submission for collections could be better spent providing services to patrons and the library community.

The Finance Office also has to put in time submitting these items for collection and for tax refund garnishment. It should be noted that garnishing income for late library fees from an individual who needs that refund to meet other obligations causes no end of upset for the patron, the library, and the county.

The time spent on processing these late fines is the equivalent of spending dollars to collect dimes. It does not make sense for late fine amounts.

The library is not proposing the elimination of charges for lost or damaged books. We are entirely in favor of continuing to recoup our investment in books and other library materials since this expense is worth the investment of time.

We believe that, by eliminating overdue/late fines altogether, we will remove the greatest barrier to access, which would hopefully reduce the fear of consequences for coming to the library and using its resources.

Fines damage library-community relations and erode trust. We are in effect charging penalties for reading. This works against our mission to foster and support the love of reading. Our goal is to have a different relationship with our patrons that is focused on helping them find the resources and information that they need to improve the quality of their lives.

Ensuring access and equity for all residents of the county, including people from underserved groups, requires forethought, intention, planning, and resources. Wonderful things are happening in Madison County, thanks to forward-thinking people like all of you, and we want the library to be part of that vision for the future for all our citizens, in education, employment, and overall quality of life.

In conclusion, these are the arguments in favor of going fine free

- Fines disproportionately affect lower income patrons and those on a fixed budget
- Fines are punitive and not effective at teaching people how to do better
- Fines are not a significant part of the budget
- Eliminating fines may improve circulation
- Patrons can still donate money to the library if they are able
- Improved Patron/Library relationship
- Improve staff morale
